Doves Assail U.S. Plan for New Bomber

GAO Report Cites Jet's Rising Costs

By Michael Getler
WASHINGTON, May 4 (WP).—Congressional doves seeking to cut Pentagon spending today called for scrapping the Air Force's plans to build a new fleet of B-1 manned bombers, claiming the project might eventually cost $7 billion with no guarantees that the planes could get through modernized Soviet air defenses.

The foes of the new plane, one of the Air Force's most cherished projects, urged that Congress cut the $700 million in the new budget for more work on the plane down to $30 million, enough to pay the costs of terminating contracts.

Instead of the B-1, a 16-page report issued by the Members of Congress for Peace Through Law recommended that research be in on a less expensive plane which could stay outside the range of Russian anti-aircraft defenses and fire long-range missiles to targets that the B-1 is intended to bomb by flying right over them.

McGovern Is Co-Author
Sen. George McGovern, D., D., presidential hopeful and co-author of the B-1 report along with Rep. John F. Seiberling, D., Ohio, told a press conference at the current arsenal of U.S. bombers—aging B-52s and newer B-111s—was enough bomber power and could be made to last through the end of this decade.

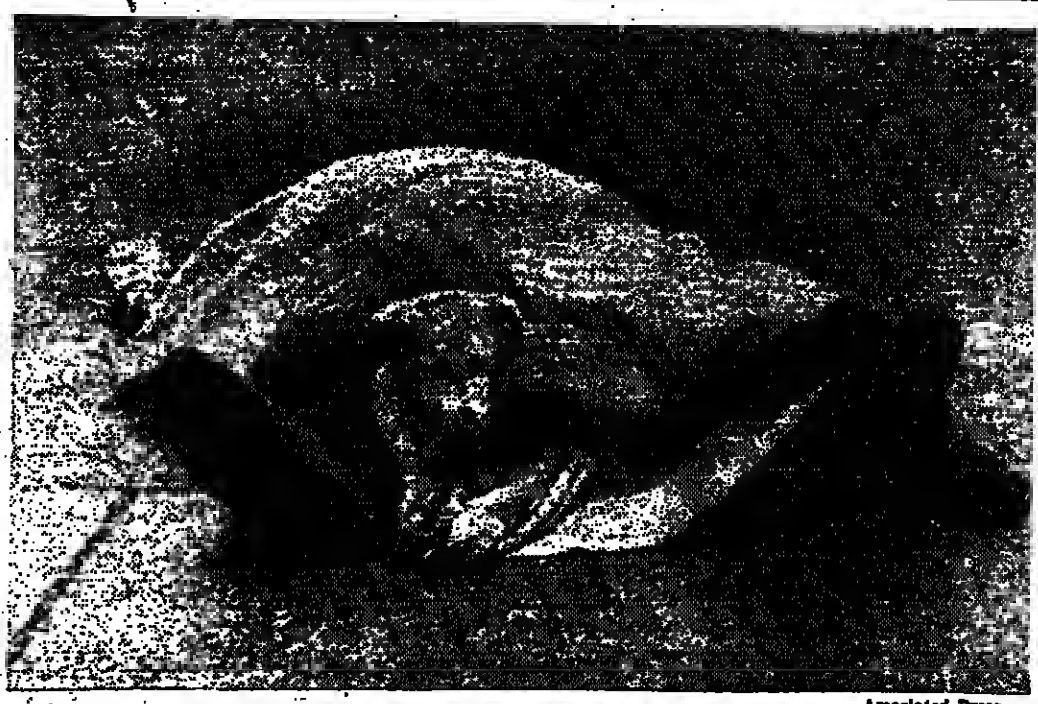

The United States could afford to wait for another year to see an agreement can be reached on the SALT talks to put limits on nuclear weapons. Sen. McGovern said it was also questionable whether ten or 15 years from now members would play any role at all in nuclear deterrence.

The MCFPL is a 115-member bipartisan coalition of Senate and House lawmakers, bound together in opposition to a number of military spending priorities. MCFPL reports have frequently obtained some of the most ill-reasoned criticism leveled at the Pentagon. Members believe they have a greater chance in influencing Pentagon spending as a rule of the congressional deities of the SST. That vote owed, they said, that public opinion can be aroused to defeat programs with very strong financial and political backing.

The B-1 has strong backing in a Pentagon and would be produced in job-starved Southern Florida, which gives the project considerable political sensitivity as well.

The MCFPL report contends that the B-1 will probably not be able to get through the massive Russian air defenses and it is down the costs. It is cutting the very things that would make it a better chance—super-speed at low level and fewer air-to-air attack missiles and ways to help it get through.

Air Force View
The Air Force maintains that building a plane to fire a missile over thousands of miles is no different from using an ICBM. It says the bomber is needed to go far behind and hit remaining Soviet missiles that were not in an initial attack.

Omission Was First Since 1964

Pulitzer Prizes Issued—Except for Fiction

By Peter Kihss
NEW YORK, May 4 (NYT).—An Off-Broadway play, "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds," by Paul Zindel, won the 1971 Pulitzer Prize for drama yesterday. It was the second Off-Broadway winner, following a first breakthrough last year.

For the first time since 1964, there was no Pulitzer Prize for fiction. Fiction jurors were understood to have offered three candidates—"Mr. Sammler's Planet" by Saul Bellow, "Losing Battles" by Eudora Welty and "The Wheel of Love and Other Stories" by Joyce Carol Oates.

The advisory board on the Pulitzer Prizes, which receives jury recommendations but may substitute choices of its own, decided in a closed-door meeting, however, that no work had qualified under the standard for a distinguished book of fiction by an American author published in 1970. The Columbia University trustees, who have the ultimate responsibility, upheld the board's view.

Among 17 prizes announced in the 56th annual year of the awards in journalism, letters and music, the prize for distinguished criticism went to Harold C. Schonberg, music critic of The New York Times. The prize for criticism was first awarded last year, going to Ada Louise Huxtable, architecture critic of The Times.

Environmental Coverage
The gold medal for meritorious public service by a newspaper went to the Winston-Salem (N.C.) Journal Sentinel for coverage of environmental problems that included blocking of proposed strip mining for aluminum ore endangering thousands of acres of Blue Ridge Mountain country.

The Kent State University disorders in Ohio, in which four students were killed by National Guard bullets just a year ago yesterday, led to two Pulitzer Prizes.

One, for general local reporting, went to the staff of the Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal for its coverage of the tragedy. The other—for spot news photography—went to a student photographer, John Paul Flio, 22, of the Valley Daily News & Daily Dispatch of Tarentum and New Kensington, Pa., for a picture of a distraught girl kneeling over one slain student's body.

Four prizes in letters were as follows:
History—"Roosevelt: The Soldier of Freedom" by James MacGregor Burns, the second of two volumes on the life of Franklin D. Roosevelt by the Williams College professor of government.

Biography—"Robert Frost: The Years of Triumph, 1915-1939," by Lawrence R. Thompson, who carried on research since 1939 as the poet's companion with the understanding that the work would not be published during Mr. Frost's lifetime.

Poetry—"The Carrier of Ladders," by William S. Merwin, the seventh volume of his own poetry, by an author who has also translated poetry from French, Spanish, Latin and Portuguese.

General Non-Fiction—"The Rising Sun," by John Toland.

the story of Japan during World War II.
The Pulitzer Prize in music went to "Synchronisms No. 6 for Piano and Electronic Sound" by Mario Davidovsky, associate professor of music at City College and lecturer in music at Columbia. The prize for the mixed-medium work followed last year's Pulitzer Prize given to a composition on an electronic synthesizer for the first time.

Among the 11 journalism prizes were:

Wilson, in Texas, Says U.S.-U.K. Tie Is 'Indispensable'

AUSTIN, Texas, May 4 (Reuters).—British Labor party leader Harold Wilson said yesterday that a close relationship between Britain and the United States is "an essential, indispensable, vital factor in world affairs."

The former prime minister was speaking to a joint session of the Texas House of Representatives and Senate here.

Ex-President Lyndon B. Johnson, Mr. Wilson's weekend host at the LBJ Ranch, also addressed the legislature, for the first time since he left office in 1969. He paid tribute to "our old and dear friend, Harold Wilson."

Most of Mr. Wilson's 20-minute address was devoted to praise of Johnson and Mr. Johnson. He said the Johnson concept of a "great society" will "dominate the political and social agenda not only of this state and this country but of the world."

Mr. Wilson said, "I had five years of close working with a great Texan in the maintenance and building up of that close relationship between the United States and Britain... which is an essential, indispensable, vital factor for good or for evil. And we must make it for good in world affairs."

19-Man Criminal Ring Uncovered in Germany
FRANKFURT, May 4 (UPI).—Police said today that they have arrested a 19-man gang of criminals that specialized in a variety of serious crimes.

A criminal police spokesman said that the gang was based in Frankfurt but operated in many European countries. He said that it was suspected of having stolen automobiles, forged U.S. $100 bills, peddled narcotics and weapons, falsified documents and trafficked in stolen goods. Those arrested included 11 Italians, four Frenchmen and four Germans.

Apartheid Articles
International Reporting—Jim Lee Hoagland of The Washington Post for reporting on South Africa's apartheid system of racial separation and its effects. Editorial Writing—Horace G. Davis Jr., a professor at the University of Florida, for more than 30 editorials for the Gainesville (Fla.) Sun in support of peaceful desegregation of Gainesville schools. It was the second Pulitzer Prize for editorials by a writer for the newspaper, purchased by the New York Times last October.

Cartooning—Paul Conrad of the Los Angeles Times for his editorial cartooning during 1970. It was the second Pulitzer Prize for Mr. Conrad, following his 1964 award for work for the Denver Post.

Feature Photography—Jack Dykinga of the Chicago Sun-Times for pictures of children in the Lincoln and Dixon State Schools for the Retarded in Illinois.

Commentary—William A. Caldwell of the Record, Hackensack, N.J., for his daily column on local affairs, "Simeon Stylites," which he has been writing for more than 40 years.

The prizes provide for $1,000 awards in each category, aside from the gold medal for public service, so that the two UPI writers—Miss Franks and Mr. Powers—will each receive $500.

Hire U.S. Teachers, West German Urges
MAINZ, West Germany, May 4 (UPI).—Bernhard Vogel, the cultural affairs minister of the Rheinland-Pfalz state, has called for the hiring of unemployed American teachers to help alleviate an acute shortage of instructors in West German schools.

Mr. Vogel told newsmen he was submitting such a proposal to the next conference of state cultural affairs ministers set for Friday.

Mariner Launch Due Saturday

U.S. Satellites Will Aim at Orbit of Mars

By Marvin Miles

PASADENA, Calif., May 4.—America's first attempt to place a satellite in orbit around another planet will be launched from Cape Kennedy next Saturday, the opening shot in dual explorations of Mars by the California Institute of Technology's Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL) here.

Mariner-8 should start circling the red planet next Nov. 14, about ten days before the arrival of its sister ship, Mariner-9, scheduled for launch from the Cape May 18.

The twin, windmill-shaped spacecraft, controlled at the JPL, will fly a little more than six months to inspect Mars in orbit for at least 90 days each.

The first of the two probes is to swing within 750 miles of the planet on a mission to map 70 percent of its surface, while the second spacecraft will dip as low as 830 miles for repeated studies of selected Martian areas, to observe recurring phenomena such as seasonal changes, clouds and dust storms.

All previous JPL explorations of Mars for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have been fly-by missions—one in 1965 and two in 1969—and the closest approach was 2,100 miles.

Mr. Schneiderman noted that the dual mission, emphasized that instruments aboard the orbiting spacecraft could not determine if there is any form of life on Mars.

Correlation of photographs with other data may yield information on the possibility of life forms, however, or on the suitability of the planet as a habitat for life in rudimentary plant form.

Black Panther's Case Is Dropped
SAN FRANCISCO, May 4 (UPI).—A Federal judge today dismissed charges against Black Panther leader David Hilliard, who was accused of threatening to kill President Nixon.

The government gave up its case against Mr. Hilliard rather than turn over to the Panther's attorney its wiretap evidence.

U.S. District Judge William P. Gray ruled that there was no national security issue involved and therefore wiretap evidence of the government violated the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution.

E. Mikkelsen, Danish Arctic Explorer, Dies

Led Several Parties On Polar Expeditions

COPENHAGEN, May 4 (UPI).—Capt. Ejnar Mikkelsen, 90, one of Denmark's greatest Arctic explorers, died last night.

He led several Danish, British and American expeditions to the North Pole and East Greenland 60 years ago.

In 1909 he spent almost two years on Greenland's northeast coast after losing his boat and most of his gear. Capt. Mikkelsen and a Danish companion had attempted to find the bodies of another Danish-led expedition, Mylius-Erichsen, which perished in 1907.

During World War II he was adviser on Greenland to the Danish Embassy in Washington.

Marion H. Van Berg

OMAHA, Neb., May 4 (AP).—Marion H. Van Berg, 75, whose horses won more money than those of any other thoroughbred owner in the nation, died at an Omaha hospital yesterday.

Mr. Van Berg was a member of the National Thoroughbred Racing Hall of Fame and was the first person to be named a member of Nebraska's corresponding state group.

He had been in racing since 1937 and through 1970 his horses had won a total of $13,938,965. The returns came through 4,691 firsts, 3,891 place horses and 3,287 thirds. He had started 24,278 horses in thoroughbred races.

Leadership of U.S., Russians Is Challenged at Arms Talks

By Thomas J. Hamilton

GENEVA, May 4 (NYT).—Mexico urged the other non-aligned members of the Geneva Disarmament Conference today to revolt against United States and Soviet leadership and draw up their own proposals on the two issues that the superpowers have shelved: a combined ban on biological and chemical warfare and the prohibition of underground nuclear tests.

In a sweeping attack, Jorge Castaneda, the Mexican delegate at the 25-nation conference, said that the 12 nations—the so-called nonaligned participants—should draw up their own proposals on the two issues that the Soviet Union and the United States have shelved, namely, a combined ban on biological and chemical warfare and the prohibition of underground nuclear tests.

The 12 nations, not always neutral in East-West disputes, were drawn up their own proposals on the two issues that the Soviet Union and the United States have shelved, namely, a combined ban on biological and chemical warfare and the prohibition of underground nuclear tests.

He conceded that the explanation given by both—disagreement on the inspection problem—may have been responsible. But he added that "some other reasons" could have led them to exclude chemical weapons.

Both the British and the Communist nations' draft treaties before the conference, Mr. Castaneda charged, "should be considered as agreements that do not ban the production of chemical weapons" rather than as proposals for the prohibition of biological weapons.

His sharp criticisms brought out the growing discontent among most of the 12 nonaligned members over the determination of Washington and Moscow, as co-chairmen, to confine conference discussions to the prohibition of biological weapons. Sweden and Yugoslavia had already criticized the two superpowers on similar grounds but in less scathing language.

A source said tonight the joint stand of the superpowers against consideration of the two favorite issues of the nonaligned countries derives from their desire to avoid mutual recriminations that would mar the atmosphere of the strategic arms limitation talks in Vienna.

However, some of the non-aligned participants here are jealous of the Vienna talks, complain about the lack of progress being made there, and have even made veiled threats to take up the missile problems here.

Russians Oppose Inspection

On the underground nuclear test ban, the Soviet Union continues to hold out against the U.S. demand for on-site inspections. But Mrs. Alva Myrdal of Sweden has already implied that the real reason is that they need underground tests—tests in the atmosphere and in space are already prohibited—to perfect the very missiles that the Vienna talks are intended to do away with.

Mrs. Myrdal again urged the conference today to take up the two-year-old Swedish draft treaty ban on underground tests without compulsory on-site inspection.

The nonaligned countries have been particularly critical of the Soviet Union's exclusion of chemical weapons from the proposed ban because Moscow's original proposal last year was what they wanted. On March 30, however, the Soviet Union and other Communist nations submitted a new proposal banning only biological weapons.

Moscow thus aligned itself with the United States and Britain, which have argued throughout that it is too early to include chemical weapons because some chemicals have both civilian and military uses. Hence, they insist, no dependable method of verifying compliance has even been suggested.

Polish-Born American Admits Informing to Gain Asylum

WARSAW, May 4 (Reuters).—A Polish-born American engineer, Adam Teofil Muller, admitted in court here today that he gave Western intelligence officers information about a Polish steel plant and nearby military units when he fled the country nearly 13 years ago.

"I gave them all the information I knew. I answered all their questions," he told five judges of a Warsaw district military court trying him on charges of betraying industrial and military secrets.

An indictment read at the opening of the trial today said Mr. Muller, former department planner in the Lenin steel works at Nowa Huta, near Krakow, admitted giving the information to British, American and French intelligence officers in West Berlin in order to be granted asylum in the West.

Mr. Muller, 43, moved from West Germany to the United States in 1960 and was arrested last October while on a visit to his 81-year-old father in Kielce, the court was told.

His home is Dayton, Ohio, where his wife and three young children live. He said he also had a 19-year-old son in Poland by a previous marriage.

The court went into closed session for about three hours after the reading of the indictment as Mr. Muller was questioned on secret matters. Western reporters, U.S. Consul Terence Douglas, and Ryszard Mrotek, a Polish-American lawyer representing Mr. Muller's family, were asked to leave.

When the judge asked him if he felt himself Polish or American, he sobbed as he replied: "I have always felt myself Polish. My children write letters to me in Polish."

Earlier Mr. Muller told the court he possessed both Polish and American citizenship.

The charge carries a minimum penalty of five years jail and a maximum of death.

Besides information about the Lenin steel works, he is alleged to have made sketches and given the location of airfields and military units in the Krakow area.

Mr. Muller told the court he left Poland because of "distress" caused by the break-up of his first marriage.

He said he fled to West Berlin in August, 1958, while on a trip to East Germany with a party of 13 Poles.

He told the court that during questioning an American intelligence officer asked him: "What would you say if I gave you $5,000 or $10,000 and sent you back to Poland to work for us?"

"I answered that as a Pole I would not be able to work against Poland and I did not possess the nervous predisposition for the job," he said.

Boy's Arrest In Algeria Is Protested

French Teachers Start 23-Day Strike

ALGERIA, May 4 (Reuters).—A number of French university teachers began a two-and-a-half-day strike here today to protest the four-day detention by Algerian authorities of a 15-year-old French boy.

A 300-strong association of teachers issued a communiqué announcing the strike and charging that the boy had been ill-treated during his detention.

In Paris, official sources said today the French Embassy in Algeria had protested to the Algerian government over the detention as part of an effort to improve conditions under which a number of French citizens were being held in Algerian prisons.

The teachers' strike and embassy protest came as reliable sources reported that a number of Frenchmen had been arrested by Algerian security forces in the last few days.

The teachers' communiqué said Fabrice Garnier, a pupil at a French high school here, was arrested on April 22 and held for two days by the police. Her Algerian husband, the boy's stepfather, is believed to be a member of the outlawed Algerian Communist party.

There are about 500 French teachers in Algerian higher education institutions.

'Other Intrigues'

The official Algerie Presse news agency described the strike as a new maneuver to exert pressure on Algeria in its current oil dispute with France.

Denouncing the strike, which it linked with the weekend withdrawal of French oil technicians of the Compagnie Francaise des Petroles-Algerie, the news agency referred to "a number of other intrigues which would be disclosed at the appropriate time."

Reliable sources said recent arrests included three office clerks working for French Embassy administrative services, a radio-telegraphist and a printing-plant technical manager. French consular officials have not been able to visit them and no reasons for the arrests have been given, the sources said.

The Algerian government-controlled press spoke today of passivity on the part of the French police regarding attacks and press campaigns directed against Algerian nationals in France.

The semi-official daily El Moudjahid recently published several critical pieces on the conditions of Algerians in France.

There are an estimated 600,000 Algerians in France. Under a three-year agreement, which expires at the end of this year, 35,000 Algerian workers are allowed into France every year.

Italy's Bird Lovers Protest Pigeon Shoot

MILAN, May 4 (AP).—Italian bird lovers filed charges of cruelty today against organizers of the world pigeon shooting championships which opened here today.

The charges, filed with the state's attorney in Milan, cited a 1913 law prohibiting "games or entertainments involving torture to animals." The attorney took no immediate action.

Organizers of the championships bringing 500 contestants here from 13 nations said they weren't worried about the complaint. "Pigeon shooting is allowed by law in Italy," a spokesman said. More than 10,000 pigeons were expected to be shot during the competition.

Ceylon Says 1,700 Rebels Surrender During Amnesty

By Eric Pace

COLOMBO, Ceylon, May 4 (NYT).—The Ceylonese government reported today that more than 40 rebels were killed and more than 1,700 surrendered during the four-day amnesty period that ended this afternoon.

In a communiqué the government also said anti-rebel "vigilance committees" were being formed in villages around the country as guerrilla bands started a wave of kidnappings, robberies and arms thefts.

Down town Colombo was under heavy guard as Ceylon's House of Representatives met. One opposition member reported that a Trotskyite representative, Vasudeva Nannayakara, had been taken into custody by the authorities at the height of the rebel insurrection last month. It was the first word that any prominent Ceylonese might have some connection with the disorders.

Mr. Nannayakara is a member of the Trotskyite Lanka Sama Samaja party, which belongs to the ruling United Front coalition put together by Prime Minister Srimavo Bandaranaike. She was absent from today's session, which was guided by troops bearing new British-made sub-machine guns.

Outside the capital, many clashes between rebels and security forces were reported. The 40 guerrillas were reported killed in engagements in hilly country to the northeast of here.

Unofficially it was said that most of the rebels who surrendered during the amnesty period were not members of the movement's hard core. Those surrendering have been promised friendly treatment and "rehabilitation."

Hundreds of them were already installed today just outside Colombo at the campus of Wednesday University, which, like most Ceylonese educational institutions, has been closed since the revolt broke out last month.

Government officials contend that the rebels' appeal is waning. Also symptomatic, they say, are the vigilance committees that are being formed in rural areas. Their purpose is to provide opposition guerrilla bands that pass through the villages in search of food, arms and other support.

U.S. Experts Assess Honecker No East German Shift Seen Despite Ulbricht's Departure

By Tad Szulc

WASHINGTON, May 4 (NYT).—American experts in Communist affairs said yesterday that there were indications that Walter Ulbricht may have received a "mild rebuke" to resign now as first secretary of the East German Socialist Unity (Communist) party in the interest of "orderly transition" to the approach of the party's eighth congress, to be held in June.

But Mr. Ulbricht's replacement by Erich Honecker came as no surprise to official U.S. observers, who do not expect any noticeable changes in East German policy or style in the immediate future.

Although Mr. Honecker is regarded as a Communist "hard-liner" and a critic of policies leading toward an East-West détente, particularly as between East and West Germany, qualified observers here suggest that the Ulbricht resignation is certain to be seen throughout Eastern Europe as another evolutionary milestone.

Mr. Ulbricht's continuing in the post of head of state is considered here as a purely honorary arrangement. His departure from the East German political scene marks the disappearance of the last of the major Communist figures swept to power following World War II.

Previous Victim

The previous victim of this evolution was Poland's Wladyslaw Gomulka, who fell in disgrace in the early 1950s, regained power in 1956, but was ousted last December following workers' riots in northeastern cities.

These Polish riots had also caused some concern about the stability of the East German regime, which moved in January to reduce prices of consumer goods. At the time of the Polish disturbances, Soviet troops stationed in East Germany were placed on alert.

Mr. Honecker was reported to have opposed public discussions between East and West German leaders as far back as 1966, despite Mr. Ulbricht's approval. Given his background as a staunch opponent of détente policies and his more recent public statements against the Catholic efforts at rapprochement advocated by West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, American analysts doubted that his rise to power would facilitate further East-West relaxation.

Background Hints

Mr. Honecker's control of the East German security apparatus and his reputed lack of popularity among younger Communists likewise appeared to militate against any hopes of liberalization in his country.

But American official observers cautioned against too hasty conclusions. Noting that unlike Mr. Ulbricht, Mr. Honecker had not spent the war years in the Soviet Union and that he had ties with the younger generation of East German Communist "technocrats," these observers said that the role to be played by the 58-year-old Honecker should not be "prejudged."

"When [Alexander] Dubcek came to power in Czechoslovakia in 1968," one specialist said, "we had no reasons to suspect him of liberal inclinations. So let us not jump to conclusions now."

Gerek Sends Greetings

WARSAW, May 4 (Reuters).—The Polish Communist leader, Edward Gerek, congratulated Mr. Honecker, East Germany's new party chief, in a cable published here today and promised to work to develop Polish-East German cooperation in unity and full understanding.

Another message to Mr. Honecker's predecessor, Mr. Ulbricht, praised the retiring East German leader as "an outstanding statesman and activist of the German international workers movement."

From Double Shifts

BONN, May 4 (UPI).—Chancellor Willy Brandt's minister for inner-German relations, said today that Mr. Ulbricht's resignation probably means immediate political changes.

Egon Franke said that the West German government would be watching carefully to see whether the leadership change in East Germany had any practical results.

Refugees Burden India

NEW DELHI, May 4 (AP).—Premier Indira Gandhi said today that the million refugees who have crossed into India from East Pakistan are "a big burden" to the country.

She said her government is "trying to secure help from international organizations" but so far has not received much assistance.

Mrs. Gandhi added that the government has no intention of settling the refugees in India on a permanent basis.

"We intend to keep them till they go back," she told newsmen.

The government announced last month that it would "cheerfully" bear the financial burden of maintaining and feeding the refugees in the relief camps set up along India's 1,949-mile border with East Pakistan.

Various international relief organizations have also announced plans to send food and medical supplies to the camps.

French Anti-Smoking Drive Urged by Medical Academy

PARIS, May 4 (Reuters).—A report to the French Academy of Medicine today urged a serious drive against smoking in France—where tobacco is a state-owned monopoly.

The report called for a nationwide anti-smoking campaign similar to efforts made in the United States and Russia, including the labelling of cigarettes as harmful to health and a ban on all advertising.

It was drawn up for France's highest medical body by Dr. André Dufour, who criticized the government for doing nothing to stop the growing number of smokers in this country.

"Smokers are pursued by tobacco advertising, newspapers and cinemas are full of photographs of politicians and stars with cigarettes or pipes in their mouths," Dr. Dufour, a prominent Paris surgeon, said.

The report, which will be studied by an academy commission before being presented to the authorities, could prove an embarrassment for the government of President Georges Pompidou—himself a chain smoker.

Dr. Dufour said France should set limits for the amount of nicotine contained in tobacco sold for consumption.

He said the state tobacco monopoly, SETTA, had chemists capable of finding out the tolerable ceiling for nicotine content.

Apart from the proposed ban on all advertising and the marking of cigarette packs with the danger warning, Dr. Dufour proposed putting up anti-smoking posters in schools and curbing smoking in the French armed forces—where he said 60 percent of male smokers first gained the habit.

The report criticized SETTA for trying to "falsely localize" the tobacco problem by making a modest contribution to cancer research. Cancer, the report said, was merely one of the health risks presented by smoking.

The fact that the state runs the tobacco industry has often been brought up by France's anti-smoking crusaders as a reason why this country has been slower than many others to campaign against tobacco.

Franklin's Home in London Almost Goes Too Public

By Richard Reston

LONDON, May 4.—Ben Franklin, that American statesman, writer and scientist of the 18th century, has a sense of humor, turning his house into a public bathroom for British Railways was going too far.

The British, who pride themselves on a sense of historical proportion, seem to have got it wrong this time. That is until the arrival of the Anglo-American friends came to the rescue of a memory, to say nothing of his use.

Franklin lived on Craven Street, the heart of London for 13 years. He was here at various times as an emissary from the British colony of Pennsylvania to later as the first American minister to Europe.

The only trouble with the location of his house these days is as it backs on Charing Cross railway station. According to Franklin's friends, British Rail officials wanted to expand the station's public lavatories, making stalls "or something." That meant knocking the Franklin use down.

Enter Lady Dartmouth, a middle-aged woman when it comes to people "messing" about with royal buildings. The whole thing was touch and go as Lady Dartmouth explains: "The Franklin house was in danger. Now I have stopped the disaster. Mind you, I don't want to be beastly to British Railways. I went around and tried to get British Rail and they were very nice indeed."

She says railway officials have agreed to a new 14-year lease to the house. Moreover, the Franklin house has just been designated a building of historic merit.

The house is much the way Franklin left it two centuries ago. It still contains the same paneled parlor and sloping staircase. "It is," says Lady Dartmouth, "a house of thrilling historical interest."

She and her British and American friends in London are now seeking $24,000 needed to do restoration work that will insure that the toilets of Charing Cross move somewhere other than the home of Benjamin Franklin.

Peking Assails U.S. Attempt To Deal With Both Chinas

HONG KONG, May 4 (NYT)—Peking radio declared tonight that President Nixon's expressed desire for the normalization of relations between the United States and China was "fraudulent" in light of last week's State Department statement on "Nationalist China."

Denouncing the statement, in which the State Department press officer Charles Bray described the sovereignty of Taiwan as "an unsettled question subject to future international resolution," the Peking radio called for the withdrawal of all U.S. forces from the island and the Taiwan Strait.

The radio, in a broadcast monitored here, described the visit of an American table tennis team to China as a "new development" in the friendship between the American and Chinese people, but took a jaundiced view of official efforts to improve ties with Peking.

The radio also carried the text of a commentary in Peking's Jemshin Jih Pao accusing the U.S. government of "hostility to the Chinese people" and of "brazen interference" in China's internal affairs.

Early Ties Unlikely. The two attacks appeared to dim the prospect of an early improvement of Chinese-American relations on a government level while approving further people-to-people contacts.

The Peking radio attacked not only the Taiwan statement but also the report of a presidential commission headed by Henry Cabot Lodge, which said the United States should support Peking's admission to the United Nations while opposing the expulsion of the nationalist government of the Republic of China on Taiwan.

The radio noted that on April 28 Mr. Nixon said at a news conference the Lodge report was being given consideration in the high councils of the U.S. government and said this showed that the United States was "peddling the plot of two Chinas or one China, one Taiwan."

"There is only one China in the world," the broadcast said. "Taiwan is an inalienable part of China's sacred territory. This has constantly been the solemn stand of the Chinese people."

Assails Administration. The radio said that the Nixon administration was "hurriedly showing all kinds of attitudes on improving relations with China."

Declaring that the Nixon administration was beset with difficulties at home and abroad, the radio said the United States was vainly attempting to "gain political capital and extricate itself from its isolated situation."

While attacking the U.S. government, the broadcast asserted that the American people were always friendly to the Chinese people and resolutely supported them in their "just struggle to liberate Taiwan," and their demand for the withdrawal of U.S. forces from Taiwan and the Taiwan Strait.

Calling on the U.S. to stop interfering in China's internal affairs, the Peking radio said that if it persisted in its hostility to the Chinese people, the Nixon administration would become more isolated and would suffer complete defeat.

U.S. Receives Taipei Protest On Its Status

State Dept. Suggestion On Peking Is Spurned

By Chalmers M. Roberts

WASHINGTON, May 4 (WP).—The Republic of China on Taiwan has protested both in Taipei and Washington over last week's State Department assertion that sovereignty over that island is an unsettled question.

Department spokesman Charles W. Bray 3d said yesterday the protest was delivered in Taipei to U.S. Ambassador Walter F. McCosmough by Foreign Minister Chow Shu-kai and in Washington to Assistant Secretary of State Marshall Green by the chargé here.

Mr. Bray said that the United States reaffirmed that there has been no change in the American defense commitment to, and in diplomatic support for, Chiang Kai-shek's regime.

But Mr. Bray flatly refused to discuss President Nixon's remark last week describing as "completely unrealistic" the State Department's suggestion, aired by Mr. Bray, that the two rival Chinese regimes negotiate to settle their dispute over Taiwan's status.

"Put in Perspective"

The most Mr. Bray would say was that the President's remarks had "put the matter in the proper perspective." He also said the United States had told Taipei that it reaffirmed its advocacy of "settlement of disputes in the area by peaceful means exclusively."

Mr. Bray said that thus far there have been no requests from Peking for visas for Chinese to visit the United States, and that as yet no new Sino-American meeting has been arranged at Warsaw.

Meanwhile, Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R., Mass., urged yesterday that the United States sponsor a resolution to admit the People's Republic of China to the United Nations, while allowing Nationalist China to retain a seat in the General Assembly.

This "would remove from us the onus of obstructing" Peking membership and "would place the ball squarely in the court of Peking and Taipei for determination as to whether they would accept membership on those terms," Sen. Brooke said. Much the same proposal was made Sunday by Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R., N.Y.

The Siege of Washington

It is doubtful whether, at least since the Civil War, Washington has seen quite so much military activity as when the Mayday Tribe tried to disrupt the capital on Monday. With some 7,000 taken into custody, it is certainly a far cry from the way the first march on Washington was dispersed, with the arrest of "General" Coxey for walking on the grass. No one—although some of the tribe profess to do so—can feel happy about the event.

Out of the welter of emotions that the incursion of the Mayday Tribe occasioned, there are a few facts that stand out. In the first place, no group of 15,000 persons, however committed, however dedicated, can claim to dictate the policies of 200 million people, who have ample political resources for making their wishes felt.

In the second place, no degree of dedication or commitment can justify the means used by the tribe to make themselves heard. If the right of revolution is cited, it can be pointed out that this was not a revolution, whatever the motives of the demonstrators; it could have had no possible outcome except a certain amount of disturbance of traffic and a strain on the facilities of Washington for the reception of unwelcome guests. When those arrested, detained behind wire fences, made themselves out to be martyrs of a repressive system, held in concentration camps for their political convictions, too many people could remember that they were rounded up for the civil offense of throwing trash cans into the street.

Thus, in the sadness that every American must feel over these events of May, a large part must spring from the realization that 15,000 or more young people have projected themselves so far into some fantasy land of politics that they can invest themselves with some fancied right to block traffic in the name of their convictions.

But there is the greater sadness in realizing that the context in which these wild acts were committed was created by a grave national error. There is no absolute certainty that without the Vietnamese war, an uprooted youth would not be a problem—similar problems exist almost everywhere, so they cannot be ascribed to any single surface cause. Nevertheless, the war was the specific target of the Mayday Tribe, and the war is responsible for whatever sympathy they may evoke. Far more impressive demonstrations against the war have occurred in Washington, far more responsible arguments have been made against it. But the plain truth was exposed again on Monday; whatever the speed with which Mr. Nixon is able to disentangle the nation from Southeast Asia, America has paid, is paying and will continue to pay a heavy bill in disillusionment—and new, dangerous illusions—for its venture into Vietnam.

After Ulbricht's Fall

Many years of history give evidence that the head of a ruling Communist party does not resign voluntarily, whatever the official communiqués may say. Khrushchev, in 1964, Novotny in 1968 and Gomulka only last December all technically "resigned," but actually were forced out of office.

Now the man who was the most politically long-lived Gauleiter in all Eastern Europe, Walter Ulbricht, has stepped down from his post and been succeeded by Erich Honecker. The lessons of the past suggest that Ulbricht went as unwillingly as his predecessors, despite all the efforts made in East Germany Monday to surround his loss of power with every face-saving symbol possible.

The purges of Khrushchev, Novotny and Gomulka were primarily the result of internal convulsions in the countries they ruled, convulsions that ranged from the Kremlin coup that dethroned Khrushchev to the near-revolution that ended Gomulka's career. It would be surprising if Ulbricht were the victim of still-unknown turmoil in East Germany or of factional warfare in his Politburo. The worldwide astonishment at Ulbricht's replacement Monday indicates how little indication there is that internal East German conditions have in any way threatened his long rule.

Ulbricht's downfall should rather be looked at in the context of the negotiations now going on in Europe as the result of the diplomatic moves of Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany. It has been an open secret for months that Ulbricht feared and opposed the signed but as yet unratified treaties intended to normalize West Germany's relations with the Soviet Union and Poland. There has been every reason to suppose that he was trying to sabotage the four-power negotiations on the future status of Berlin, the successful conclusion of which is a prerequisite to Bonn's ratification of the treaties.

Well aware that his government had been imposed on East Germany by Soviet bayonets, Ulbricht feared the consequences of a détente atmosphere in Europe, suspecting probably that many of his Eastern European allies or even Moscow might be willing to sacrifice his view of East Germany's political needs to win concessions or aid from West Germany. Lacking Ulbricht's prestige, Honecker can hardly put up as effective a fight against détente.

If this reasoning is correct, Ulbricht may have become a victim of a decision by the Kremlin to proceed toward normalization of the situation in Europe. Such a decision, to sacrifice the Soviet Union's most prestigious East European servant, may well have been touched off by fear of the consequences of a Peking-Washington rapprochement. Moscow may have judged that this development would require utmost stability and peace on the U.S.S.R.'s western borders.

Few tears will be shed in the West because of the end of the Ulbricht era. The repressive regime Ulbricht created in East Germany is even today the most nearly Stalinist, politically, of all Eastern Europe outside Albania. The Berlin wall stands as the infamous, monument to his ruthless rule. Yet it must be granted that this wily servant of the Kremlin used the new conditions created by the Berlin wall to propel East German industry far ahead and to make that country a significant world economic power.

If Ulbricht's removal presages a normalization in the middle of Europe, the United States, too, will be faced with the problem of framing a new attitude toward the German Democratic Republic. Like the Chinese People's Republic, it exists and is unlikely soon to go away.

The D.C. Demonstrations

Into Washington swarms an army of hippies, resolved to halt government business in the U.S. capital. Among the protesters against the Vietnam war are, unquestionably, sincere individuals. But the thousands who clamor for a new "culture" based on dirt, drugs and unlimited leisure—for themselves—are contemptible. They live off the hard work of their countrymen. They enjoy the fruits of a system which they deride. They offer no alternative society. Because they have none.

—From the Daily Express.

To put America's present ills in perspective, it is necessary to remember how often before she has seemed rent and incapacitated, only to rise again, and to reflect on the immense recuperative powers with which free societies continually astonish their enemies. Yet recovery cannot start until the broad mass of American people are resolved to end the nonsense and find the right man to give their resolution effect. Let us hope that President Nixon is that man, for history is not always patient with the sick and troubled.

—From the Daily Telegraph (London).

The Dutch Elections

There is no mistaking certain definite trends. The denominational parties, both Catholic and Protestant, continue to lose ground and the old coalition between them and the right-wing Liberals has now lost its majority in the lower house of parliament. It has long been obvious that the younger voters, in particular, consider the religious label in politics to be no longer relevant in this day and age. Whichever parties are involved, the negotiations for the formation of a new government are likely to last a long time. They will probably reinforce the already widespread feeling in the country that the proportional representation system must be reformed.

Seventy-Five Years Ago

May 5, 1896

PARIS—Major William McKinley, father of the Protectionist tariff bill which bears his name, will be nominated as candidate of the Republican party for President of the United States, at the national convention, which meets in St. Louis six weeks from today. Illinois will give her 48 votes to the Ohio statesman and these ballots will turn the scale. Major McKinley, then, will definitely receive the nomination. His election is a different matter.

Fifty Years Ago

PARIS—France is paying to Napoleon Bonaparte today what might be termed the tribute of a second apothecary, and in this she is not altogether alone. People in other lands also are doing honor to the memory of perhaps the most brilliant national hero the world has known. Time does not obscure the admiration in which he is held by mankind. One of the most remarkable facts in this connection is the observation (even) in England of the centenary of his death.

The Russians Are Coming

By C. L. Sulzberger

PORT LOUIS, Mauritius.—The name of the game in the Indian Ocean is: "The Russians are coming." From South Africa to Australia and from the Persian Gulf to the Malacca Straits there is increasing obsession with Soviet gumbat diplomacy. It, as is traditional, the purpose of such diplomacy is to unbalance an adversary, Moscow is succeeding.

Mauritius is only one of dozens of islands caught up in the chess match of bases and counter-bases between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. The British have renovated the world-old Indian agreement with Australia and New Zealand to defend the Malacca Straits in the Indian Ocean's eastern gate. They have restored new life to the Simons-town naval understandings with South Africa.

Everywhere the Russians are said, feared or suspected to be moving in. P.W. Botha, South African defense minister, claims Moscow is using the nuclear stalemate to infiltrate by indirect strategy and is increasingly active in the Indian Ocean. I can tell you that the Soviets are present at 39 points in Africa, either politically, militarily or economically.

The Red Fleet

Moscow's fleet has become a formidable factor. Adm. Sergei Gorshkov, its commander in chief, proudly contends: "The Soviet Navy has been converted into an offensive-type, long-range armed force which could exert a decisive influence on the course of armed struggle in theaters of military operations of vast extent."

There are three Russian shipbuilding units in the Indian Ocean: a fishing fleet operating southward to the Antarctic, a speed-of-war support fleet, and a potential combat force. The warship Flotilla is not large and usually runs to about 20 vessels of all types dependent upon shore-based air support. Siegfried Bryer, a West German naval expert, believes it could be swiftly hunted down in any war but adds: "The Red fleet is to reduce the offensive power of the Western allies by forcing them to commit far greater forces to the defense of the sea lanes than the Soviet Union commits to their attack."

For the present Washington regards Russian naval demonstrations around here as handwringing over the wall without immediate security problems. Nevertheless, Defense Secretary Laird predicts that as the Vietnam war winds down, more resources will become available for a stronger showing in the Indian Ocean.

Until recently only a converted seaplane-tender plus two ancient destroyers were maintained by the U.S. in this region. But a task force that just sailed from the East includes a carrier, four destroyers and a submarine.

Britain's Forces

British strength is principally geographical. Various installations, mainly communications for staging areas, exist at Masirah, east of the Persian Gulf, Gan, south of the Maldives Islands, Aldabra, north of Madagascar, and Diego Garcia in the Chagos Archipelago.

Slowly but persistently the Russians are trying to offset this advantage, a process which will be enormously facilitated once the Suez Canal is reopened and Moscow can move directly from the Black Sea, past Soviet facilities in Egypt and the Red Sea, into the Indian Ocean.

Already Russia has established a series of mooring buoys in this area for submarine support. The Yemen port of Hodeida is under Soviet supervision, as is Socotra off the northeast horn of Africa, where Russian construction gangs are working. Britain's former port of Aden now has a Russian harbor master.

Moreover, far to the northeast, Soviet diplomacy is apparently intruding on the important island of Ceylon, where the once-great British base of Trincomalee has been abandoned but could easily be rehabilitated. It is ideally situated for Gorshkov's purposes, being midway between Sevastopol in the Black Sea and Vladivostok.

Last month's uprising by Maoist guerrillas against the Ceylonese government of Mrs. Bandaranaike allowed the Kremlin to fly in a detachment of MIG fighters plus maintenance crews as help against the insurgents. This could be the forerunner of a permanent Soviet air installation of crucial importance to the Russian naval position in this ocean.

Naval politics and gumbat diplomacy in the Indian Ocean don't involve large numbers of ships or huge sums of money but the stakes are immense. Nearly 50 percent of Europe's oil, 90 percent of Japan's and 80 percent of Africa's move across its greasy water. That, as will be discussed in a subsequent column, is where Mauritius comes in.

What the U.S. Isn't

By Tom Wicker

WASHINGTON—It was good, but not good enough, for President Nixon to assure Americans from Sen. Clemente that "this isn't a police state and it isn't going to become one." It was good, but not good enough, for him to declare that his administration "is against any kind of repression, any kind of action that infringes on the right of privacy."

It was good to be reassured that these are Nixon's beliefs, but it is not good enough that he asserts them without doing anything to stop those actions of the Nixon administration that called them into question. What is the meaning, for instance, of the President's statement that "as far as the subpoenaing of notes are concerned, a reporter's, as far as bringing any pressure on the networks as the government is concerned, I do not support that?"

It does not seem to mean anything, because it was, after all,

Nixon's administration that sought to subpoena the notes of reporters for the New York Times and the news magazines; it has been Vice-President Agnew who has maintained the steadiest critical pressure against the networks; it was a Nixon appointee, FCC chairman Dean Burch, who interested himself conspicuously in network analysis of presidential speeches, and one reason for the House Commerce Committee's sweeping subpoena of unused CBS film tapes, transcripts and the like—in the case of that excellent documentary, "The Selling of the Pentagon"—appears to have been administration pressure on the ranking Republican committee members.

It is just such unchecked power that can lead to a "police state." The mere threat of it is a form of repression and a certain infringement on the right of privacy. To say these things is not to suggest that Nixon and Mitchell intend to abuse their power. Evidently, they believe their powers they leave behind? And by what right do they assume that their own judgments, however well intended, are immune to those human fallibilities against which constitutional rights are the most important protection?

But how do they know who will come after them to use the precedents and procedures they establish? How do they know who will someday walk through the doors they open and seize the powers they leave behind? And by what right do they assume that their own judgments, however well intended, are immune to those human fallibilities against which constitutional rights are the most important protection?

Course Was Open

If Nixon really believed that the confidential notes of reporters ought not to be subpoenaed by the government, he could have told his Department of Justice not to do it; and most of the other items in the list of particulars above could at least have been influenced by the President. Without the groundwork laid by Agnew, for example, the House committee might well not have acted as—unfortunately—it did. Now the committee is out on a limb from which there will be no easy climb-down.

In defending Attorney General Mitchell's claim to an unlimited right to tap the telephones of people he suspects are subversives, Nixon missed the point entirely. It may well be true, as he claimed, that there are only half as many telephone taps today "as there were in 1961, '62 and '63," although this is an assertion by the FBI that both Mr. Nixon and the public must take—if at all—on faith, not on evidence. And it is certainly true that some of the vocal Democratic critics of today were not heard from "in 1968 when there was Army surveillance of the Democratic National Convention"—Nixon's words—or earlier.

A Sporting Chance

The new "Bocanaber" go-everywhere thing pictured on Page 3 of the April 28 JET is the weekend sportman's Dream Come True. Not only does it dispense injured swimmers (an increasing hazard created by old-fashioned propeller-driven boats), but it apparently generates little forest fires, and Los Angeles' forest as it progresses. Now may be the time for all those little old ladies, traditionally assisted since 1908 by Boy Scouts across busy intersections, to totter forward. Perhaps they can help some wounded Scout up the trail in pursuit of his Ecology Merit Badge. But watch out for those go-everywhere things, ma'am!

A New A-Arms Race? Under the Gun

By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON—A number of top-level U.S. defense planners believe that unless fundamental decisions on limiting nuclear weaponry are made by this fall in the Kremlin and the White House, another enormously expensive surge in the arms race will be unavoidable.

Despite President Nixon's reiteration at his April 29 press conference that he was "not discouraged" by the strategic arms limitations talks, several high-ranking officials say they sense that time is running out.

As they see it, the critical weapons systems both sides are using as bargaining chips in SALT—the huge Soviet offensive missiles and the U.S. Safeguard missile defense designed to protect Minuteman ICBMs—are developing a momentum of their own that now threatens to outpace the talks.

If a breakthrough is to come, officials believe it will have to be this year. After that, few administration experts expect Mr. Nixon to risk further delay in ordering a speedup on new U.S. weapons—bombers, missile-firing submarines and a still thicker ABM defense around Minuteman—to offset the recently discovered Soviet advances.

The New Silos

In recent months, U.S. reconnaissance satellites have spotted at least 40 new underground silos being dug in the Soviet Union for what could be a new and still larger version of the big SS-9 ICBM. Knowledgeable officials say they expect to find even more holes in coming months as satellite coverage is expanded.

There is also evidence, although it is still ambiguous—that the Russians may have begun installing multiple warheads on some existing SS-9 missiles. It has also been disclosed that work has resumed on the long-delayed ABM ring to protect Moscow from missile attack.

On the U.S. side, work continues on Safeguard, and multiple warheads of the MIRV-type that can be sent to widely separate targets continue to go to sea aboard Poseidon-carrying submarines into Minuteman-land-based missiles.

Against the backdrop of this action-reaction weapons buildup, SALT remains snagged on many of the same issues that were apparent when the talks began in late 1969.

Officials concede, however, that these issues are now at less better defined. They add that prospects of finding a way out of the impasse are not entirely gloomy.

U.S. defense planners are considering a number of possible counterproposals to the latest Soviet offer at SALT.

That proposal, made at the last few weeks at the Vienna conference site, essentially was a renewed bid—in the form of a draft treaty—to get the United States to agree to a limitation on river ABMs to protect Moscow and Washington are only.

The Nixon administration is consistently rejected this kind of agreement unless it was also to specify limits on the size and number of offensive missiles that could theoretically be used to wipe out American missile and bombers in a surprise attack. No such limitations were included in the latest Soviet draft.

No 5-Year Limit

Contrary to one published report, high-level officials say a Soviet proposal did not call for a five-year limit on the treaty. The draft did suggest that rival ABMs be limited to roughly 100 interceptor missiles each. That limit was first suggested, however, by the United States last year, when mutual Washington-Moscow ABM limitation were proposed by U.S. negotiators as part of a broader agreement that would have covered ICBMs, too.

The new Soviet proposal also fails to put limits on ABM radars, another omission, troubling some U.S. defense planners. The radars take much longer to produce than ABM missiles and launchers. They are suspicious of Soviet intention say that unless the radars are also curbed, the Russians could deploy an ABM much faster than this country could if relations eventually deteriorated.

Nevertheless, it should be noted that the recent Soviet offer came well after the President's news conference assurance that he was not discouraged over SALT. Mr. Nixon, in fact, volunteered his views on the talks. No reporter asked his opinion on SALT at the Thursday press conference.

Informed officials say privately that "it is not inconceivable" that the United States would agree to an ABM-only agreement. But they hold out little hope for the kind of accord the Soviets are pressing for.

These officials say that a potential agreement might be worked out if, as part of an ABM limit, the treaty also committed the Russians to initiate further negotiations on offensive systems as well, with a very strict—and probably short-time limit put on those negotiations. These officials stress that they are talking about what may be possible in their view. No one is willing to second-guess the President's readiness to depart in any degree from his earlier insistence that any treaty must not be limited to defensive weapons.

Officials say three separate ABM-only possibilities are getting fresh study by U.S. defense planners:

• A "zero-ABM" agreement, which would mean no ABMs on either side. With the ABMs, a country springing a surprise attack could still be devastated in return, even if only a small fraction of the enemy's missiles survived.

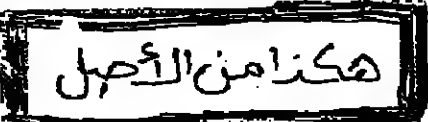

Administration sources say this approach has been pushed hard by U.S. negotiators in the past, although little public attention has focused on it.

• An agreement that would essentially allow the United States and Soviet Union to finish the limited ABMs both are already building, one around Moscow and the other around the four Minuteman bases in this country.

• Soviet proposal for protecting the two capitals. It is given virtually no chance to succeed by administration sources unless linked directly to an agreement on offensive weapons.

Planners say that even in the first two cases, the United States probably would insist on a time-limited agreement to continue talking about a halt in ICBMs.

Whether any of these proposals actually emerges from the White House, or whether the Russians will budge at all from their current position, remains to be seen. Some Kremlin watchers also fear that the Soviet negotiators may not be able to respond to a new U.S. offer without another long recess to gather instructions. And during that time, the weapons would continue accumulating.

Paris Theater: Fallen 'Angels'

Thomas Quinn Curtiss

PARIS, May 4.—The headlines are so loaded with reports of serious assassinations of public officials, of the kidnapping murder of diplomats, of assailed executives of companies and threatened coups d'état one no longer knows whether to read the front page or script of some Bowery pulse oer by Owen Davis.

Conor Cruise O'Brien

"Political Tragedy" "murderous Angels," which Littlewood has staged at the Théâtre National in French translation, the work of Conor Cruise O'Brien, an Irish statesman, is as "The Assassination" at the United Nations and has many a critical comment on his quondam for play, which he describes as political tragedy and comedy.

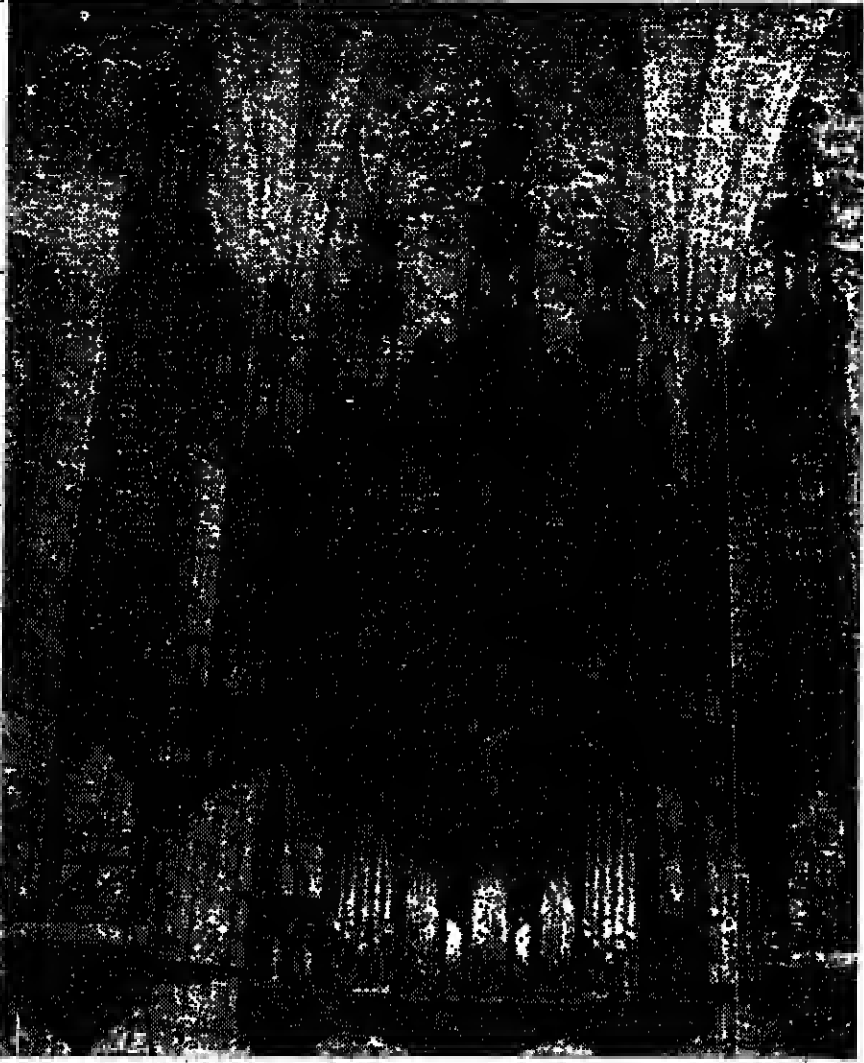

the Soviet ambassador (enacted here by the reliable Fernand Guillot) is no longer a slightly comic caricature, but a Sardonian diplomat.

What would French comedy do without the Seventh Commandment? Adultery—or suspected adultery—has been its mainstay ever since "George Dandin" and few dramatists since Molière have treated it with more witty finesse than Sacha Guitry. In "La Jalouse" which entered the repertory of the Comédie Française this week—Guitry's dialogue sparkles as brightly and as lightly as ever as he gives No. 7 yet another dusting off. The comedy is played with remarkable charm with Georges Descrières as the husband, Geneviève Castle as the wife and Bernard Dhéran as the lover, a bookish man of letters.

ing in dramatic life and effective balance. There is a sort of psychoanalytical portrait of Hammurabi and Jean-Pierre Aumont's skilful performance conveys the anguish of the doomed peacemaker—but Lumumba is so skilfully sketched that a contrasting of the two is impossible.

Miss Littlewood's production opens with an exotic jungle scene and one at once imagines that she will enliven the heavy text by treating it in reverse-form after the manner of her successful "Oh! What A Lovely War!" She has edited the original script severely, but she has not accorded it an even flow or given its individual sequences proper theatrical emphasis.

"Au Bois Luché" (at the tiny theater Le Lucernaire) is a French adaptation of Dylan Thomas's exquisite "Under Milkwood" which lyrically evokes the essence of a Welsh village on a summer day between dawn and sunset. The present staging is simply itself and, remembering the fine production that Henry Sherek gave this play in New York and London, it is interesting to observe how a very nearly perfect text can be fitted to varying interpretations. An engaging company of youngsters play it with refreshing vigor.

5,000 PIPES—The great organ at Chartres Cathedral will boom out again at official ceremonies on June 5 and 6. The organ, with its 5,000 pipes, has been undergoing restoration since World War II. Its case with lantern turrets dates from the mid-16th century.

Dining Out: The Japanese Corner of Champs-Élysées

By Naomi Barry

PARIS.—The handsomest Japanese businessmen in Paris eat their lunch at Miki. This small, attractive upstairs restaurant in the Champs-Élysées district has the gracious service of the Orient, in no way diminished by the inability of most of the help to speak either French or English. The Miki seems authentic in every way. True, you do not sit on the floor, but neither do the modern Japanese.

You can try a maximum of dishes by sharing, choosing on the basis of the explanatory translations on the menu. I had a few recollections from a trip to Japan but am not enough of an expert to order a classically balanced meal without guidance. Perhaps we made some lucky stabs. The result, however, was an absolutely delicious meal.

Portions fortunately are small. We over-ordered but still came away feeling light.

Sashimi is one of the great gastronomic luxuries of Japan. Occidentals balk at the idea of raw marinated fish. If you can swallow your prejudice, you will find it superb. Seven cubes of tuna were lined up on a narrow oblong dish with tip-tipped ends. A silver of carrot cut into a fan-tail was carefully placed off center. A dollop of cool green on a curled cucumber slice turned out to be a burning type of Japanese mustard. There was a miniature mound of finely graded horseradish. The arrangement of these bits and pieces had the refined composition of a Zen garden.

The grilled eel had been split open and laid butterfly flat. It was so delicate that we had to ask to make sure we were really eating eel. The spinach was a completely unfamiliar presentation. After being cooked, it was well dried and compressed into two small rectangular holes dusted with something that looked like brown sugar and turned out to be dried fish. It was wonderful.

Completely out of sequence came a bowl of fermented soya soup... pungent, strange, and well worth ordering again. A salad of shredded crab and thinly sliced cucumbers was served in a bowl like a tea cup. Everything was subtly orchestrated with delightful piquant sauces.

The only disappointment was in the breaded pork cubes prepared on a skewer. A little dry, a little hard. All this, including tea, a bottle of Japanese beer, and service, came to 78 francs. The quantity of food would have been more suitable for three rather than for two.

(Miki, 3 rue d'Artois, Paris 8. Telephone: 225-26-78. Usually more crowded at lunch than dinner.)

The whole neighborhood is beginning to show a Japanese touch. The California Hotel on the Rue de Berri has so many clients from Nippon that they distribute a printed page of sight-seeing information in Japanese. Serge Simon, the coiffeur at 7 Rue de Ponthieu, has a Japanese girl on his team which has attracted the cream of Japanese touring society. A health club for men, recently opened on the Rue de Berri, has chosen to call itself Samourai. Soudi, the celebrated Japanese masseur, has moved from the Rue de Ponthieu to the ultra-fashionable salons of Carli on the Faubourg St-Hippolyte. And if you are anxious to learn to speak Japanese, a course is starting on May 3. Tezui, 9 Rue Victor-Considérant, Paris 14. Telephone: 633-11-85.

Looking for Dan Buster's Gold

By Charles Hillinger

ANDREAS, Calif.—People we looked for Dan Buster's time the day he died in 1863. In rolling hills and steep stretches from Mountain Sheep Ranch to Murtry, California, mother lodes have been punched full by hundreds of men, and children in 108 years going for Buster's buried gold.

Ray Cuneo and his grandson continue the search for the gold Dan Buster buried before he died in 1863.

My granddad told old Dan Buster, "Why don't you leave your gold? You got no kin. He told granddad, "You don't need my gold. You got the store. You got money. I buried that gold. Ain't nobody ever gonna find it."

Historians report that Buster never got over his disappointment that money to free his parents was stolen by a white attorney.

Buster was quoted as having said time and time again: "I took that gold out of the ground with these old black hands. I put it back in the ground with the same hands. There it's gonna stay. No sir, that gold will never do no white man no good."

Paris Dance: Nikolais

By David Stevens

PARIS, May 4.—The Alvin Nikolais Dance Company, which carried the grand prize in the 1968 Paris Dance Festival, is back in the course of a European tour and last night it opened a stand at the Théâtre de la Ville with three relatively recent American companies do not always fare too well in Paris, which is more to do with the dance audience here than the company. Merce Cunningham is too forbiddingly avant-garde, Paul Taylor's irreverent sense of humor is too specifically American, and the New York City Ballet seems to be aimed more for the eyes than for George Balanchine's creative depth.

Nikolais is something else. He lives in a dream-like creative of his own, unrepeatable objects and figures are put in and unspooled uses and eases, with the fantastic. The electronic tapes of his own composition, are without the other references of familiar scores. He is not only the choreographer and composer, but designer and lighting supervisor and his dancers are the products of extensive training with "but," which closed last night's program, is described by Nikolais himself as "a prologue and five sections, touching on all the main events in life from birth to death. Yes, the references are unrepeatable, but the vigor of his own imagination is inevitably into play.

There were several Negro miners in the area who knew Buster and knew about his gold, but he wouldn't tell them either. When Buster died in February, 1863, townsmen tore down his cabin and dug deep beneath the swelling looking for his fortune.

Frank Cuneo, Ray Cuneo's grandfather, homesteaded the entire Camp San Antonio townsite after miners pulled out in the late 1860s. He spent the rest of his life looking for Buster's gold whenever he had a chance. So did his son.

Frank Cuneo's grandson and his great-grandson and now his great-great-grandchildren dig for the gold from time to time. Buster's gold is legendary in Calaveras County but Buster was no legend. He lived in the mining camp for 13 years. His bones lie buried in an unmarked graveyard on Ray Cuneo's ranch.

Treasure hunters with metal detectors have systematically gone over every inch of Mr. Cuneo's land. Spiritualists have tried to communicate with the dead miner. A group of Filipinos came carrying a strange three-legged table with candy, fruit and other food and left it overnight for Buster. They placed a pencil and taped a note to the table that read: "Mr. Dan Buster: Please tell us where it's buried."

V. German Payments surplus Up in March

FRANKFURT, May 4 (AP-DJ)—The most widely accepted indicator of a nation's well-being—its balance of payments—continued to register strongly in West Germany's favor according to data released today.

The surplus in its basic balance rose to 639 million deutsche marks ($45 million) in March, from a revised 263 million DM surplus in February and a $14 million DM deficit in the 1970 month, preliminary figures released by the Bundesbank showed.

The basic balance consists of the current account (trade and services) plus long-term capital flows, a measure the central bank believes gives the best indication of the nation's underlying position.

In the first three months of the year, the basic surplus was million DM, compared with a net of 3.88 billion in the 1970 year.

Dollars Flow Into Germany

In excess of what is regarded as a safe level. The result, the experts concluded, is to increase the pressure on the government to dampen currency speculation by making clear whether it intends to float the mark or follow some other course.

Still, most banking and diplomatic sources seemed agreed that even if the government does make a decision this week, it is not likely to implement it without first consulting the United States, the other five countries of the Common Market and such institutions as the International Monetary Fund.

Despite Mr. Brandt's hints about going it alone, Bonn is aware that these other countries and the IMF have strong reservations about floating. For this reason, the government is believed anxious to avoid resorting to this device if it can.

On the other hand, however, unless Mr. Brandt can quickly arrest the German inflation rate, he faces the risk of disastrous domestic political consequences.

The West Germans are known to feel that neither Washington nor the Common Market countries are sufficiently aware of the domestic implications for Mr. Brandt, and, for this reason, some observers here suspect that the current hints about imminent action are really a bit of psychological warfare aimed at arousing a greater sense of urgency about the problem within the other countries.

Japan Studies Rate Change

(Tokyo, May 4 (Reuters))

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) said today it is studying the possible revaluation of the yen, but declined to disclose any details of the study.

A spokesman said he could not confirm or deny reports that ministry officials drafted a suggestion that revaluation might become a real issue when Japan's external reserves exceed $7 billion. They now total around $4 billion.

According to one local press report, the study concluded that a revaluation by 10 percent or less would not seriously affect Japan's economic growth. At the present rate, there are 360 yen to the dollar.

MITI said its mid-April survey of industrial business trends showed that the current recession appeared to be leveling out in electric home appliance, auto, copper and electronic parts manufacturing industries.

MITI said further steps, including another cut in bank rate and increased government spending, would be necessary to stimulate an economic recovery.

U.S. Interests Take Priority, Shultz States

World Monetary Woes Seen in Second Place

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON, May 4 (W.P.)

George Shultz, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said today that the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit, while important, could not be considered "at the top of the (economic) priorities list."

Addressing a group of financial editors, he said that the administration "does not intend to see our domestic economy sacrificed to international monetary objectives."

His comments were in response to a question which solicited his views on a policy of "benign neglect" toward the balance-of-payments problem, as recommended by some distinguished academic economists.

He responded that "international trade and monetary arrangements are important, but we have to pay attention to them" and then added that domestic policy would not be subordinated to international considerations.

European officials have been critical of the "benign neglect" posture, especially because some fear that administration officials privately agree with the academic attitude. Just yesterday, Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, and Treasury Undersecretary for Monetary Affairs Paul A. Volcker tried to dispel this notion in speeches in Chicago.

Mr. Shultz said that the administration had to seek a balance in its objectives. He rejected assigning top-rank to the balance of payments problem by saying:

"That's an attitude that is not acceptable to me and I don't think it is acceptable to anyone else in the Nixon administration."

Interest Rates Dismissed

He would not predict the future course of interest rates, but he said he "hoped" that interest rates have not hit the bottom.

He acknowledged that the recent rapid drop in short-term interest rates had produced "a balance-of-payments problem that has to be considered."

But "although" interest rates have "dropped sharply," he said, "they are not low in comparison with earlier periods."

He also said that the U.S. budget deficit for fiscal 1971 would now be at least $19 billion, up slightly from the February estimate of $18.6 billion, largely because of congressional actions liberalizing the social security program "and for other reasons."

Mr. Shultz revealed that the budget deficit for fiscal 1972 would also be somewhat larger than the first estimate ($11.6 billion) but he did not offer a new figure.

Buying Spree Pushes Gold Price Higher

LONDON, May 4 (Reuters)

A sudden buying spree by gold speculators operating on the European bullion markets today pushed up the price here 22 cents to $39.65 an ounce.

That price, however, was down 21 cents from the morning fixing. In Zurich, the bid, $39.80 asked, up from $39.35-$39.50 yesterday. In Paris, the price rose to $39.92 from yesterday's $39.77.

After being virtually dormant for some weeks, the free-market gold price suddenly began moving upward last week, gaining 76 cents an ounce between Monday and Friday after French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing advocated an increase in the official price of gold, which is traded between central banks and governments at a fixed $35 an ounce.

Another factor contributing to the price rise was fear about the stability of some currencies, as the dollar, however, was offered for sale at that time, as many with gold holdings waited for a higher price.

Yesterday the price slumped in London by 27 cents an ounce.

Canada's Reserves Increase $9.2 Million

Ottawa, May 4 (AP-DJ)

Canada's foreign exchange reserves increased by $9.2 million, Canadian, during April to $4.834 billion, the Finance Department said today.

Holdings in U.S. dollars increased to $3,171 billion from $3,153 billion in March. Holdings in other currencies declined to $1,711 million from $1,681 million.

Canada's reserve position in the International Monetary Fund declined to $530.9 million from $530.3 million.

Gold holdings increased to $791.4 million from $791.2 million, while Special Drawing Rights rose to $348.2 million from $339.8 million.

Reserves Set U.K. Record

LONDON, May 4 (AP-DJ)

Britain's reserves rose 243 million ($103.2 million) in April to £1,425 billion, the highest level ever recorded, the Treasury said today.

The increase would have been greater but for an advance repayment of $8 million to West Germany, the final installment of a European Payments Union (EPU) debt that dates back to the EPU's liquidation in 1958.

April was the seventh consecutive month in which reserves rose. But the increase is smaller than was expected in view of the continuing strength of spot sterling on foreign exchange markets.

U.S. Aides Call Dollar Selling Irrational

WASHINGTON, May 4

(Reuters)—U.S. monetary officials said today the latest bout of heavy pressure against the dollar on foreign exchange markets appears "irrational if not perverse" at this time, now that transatlantic interest rates have moved into closer alignment.

They said they were keenly observing exchange market developments, but did not believe the situation should be a source of serious anxiety at this stage.

NYSE Governors Vote Aid To Ailing Investment Firm

By Philip Greer

The firm, if it should be needed. After the board's move, Morton Meyerson, a vice-president of Mr. Perot's Electronic Data Systems Corp. who will become president of Du Pont, said he expects the remaining of the firm to be completed by the end of this week. As part of the re-naming, the firm will be incorporated and change its name to Du Pont Gore Forgan Inc.

The move by the exchange indicated that the potential losses in the Du Pont rescue have skyrocketed since discussions with Mr. Perot were begun last November. At that time, officials estimated that $5 million would be needed to bring Du Pont into compliance with exchange capital rules. By December, it was up to $15 million and, in March, it was $30 million.

In addition, Mr. Perot's group, PEEM Corp., agreed to increase its investment in the firm to $40 million from the $30 million that had been agreed on in March. Mr. Perot is arranging a $30 million line of credit earmarked for the firm.

Swiss Firm Sets Its Debts At $68 Million

Financed Investments In Eurodollar Market

LAUSANNE, May 4 (AP-DJ)

Frigo's Swiss-based investment company has financed real estate investment in the Eurodollar market and declared its insolvency last week, last night reported debts to banks and other financial institutions totalling the equivalent of $68 million at the end of March and contingency liabilities of another $3.9 million.

In disclosing the debts, SIE Continentale de Gestion Financiere (Frigo) S.A., whose largest stockholders are Continental Grain Co. of New York, and Banque de l'Indochine of Paris, said a provision for losses of about $18.3 million had been established at a stockholders meeting Monday.

A ruling is due on May 19 on Frigo's application to the Lausanne district court for a moratorium on payment to creditors pending liquidation.

A Frigo spokesman confirmed that the investment company had financed real estate ventures by rolling over short-term Eurodollar loans from about 60 banks and institutions.

He said it was difficult to estimate the market value of the real estate investments, but that in any case it was not sufficient to cover Frigo's liabilities.

The case is the second failure of an important Eurodollar borrower in a year. United California Bank in Basel, an subsidiary of the United California Bank of Los Angeles, has received an extension until August of a Swiss court moratorium on payments to creditors following a loss of about $53 million that was financed largely in the Eurodollar market.

It also follows warnings from bankers in both the United States and Europe over the widespread practice by Eurodollar borrowers of financing long-term commitments with short-term loans.

The bankers say there is a risk that the insolvency of a few large borrowers could result in a chain of failures.

Observers believe a dispute between Continental Grain and Banque de l'Indochine over responsibility for Frigo's insolvency lessens the chance that creditors will receive swift payment.

Continental Grain owns about 44 percent of Frigo's equity. Banque de l'Indochine, 39 percent and other banks and institutions the remainder.

Banque de l'Indochine has disclaimed responsibility for the liabilities of Frigo and says it is suing Continental Grain for allegedly misrepresenting Frigo's assets when the bank purchased Frigo's shares in 1967.

Continental Grain says it is considering legal counteraction.

Zapata-Southdown Pact

NEW YORK, May 4 (NYT)

Directors of Zapata Southdown approved yesterday an agreement in principle providing for the exchange of certain Southdown real estate interests for all of the shares of common and preferred stock of Southdown presently owned by Zapata.

Zapata said the cost of its holdings of Southdown stock was $47 million, approximately 30 percent of Southdown's shares outstanding.

N.Y. Prices Resurge in Moderate Trade

By Vartan G. Vartan

NEW YORK, May 4 (NYT)—Prices on the New York Stock Exchange bounced back today after three sessions of profit-taking in a broad recovery that surprised some observers.

Participating in the advance were glamorous airlines, oils, aerospace issues, blue chips and oil-related issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed at the day's highest level—338.45—with a gain of 8.04.

Analysts Surprised

Over the three previous trading days, the Dow fell nearly 18 1/2. However, the market began to rally early yesterday afternoon, before closing with a loss of more than 8.

Today's brisk performance surprised some analysts who had expected further profit-taking to stifle the recent lofty gains.

But even more surprising was the market's driving strength at a time when currency speculators sent the dollar reeling on European exchanges. This type of turbulence among international currencies often has a depressing psychological impact on NYSE prices.

Gold Stocks Gain

Gold stocks gaining on the Big Board included Homestake Mining, up 1 3/8 to 29 3/8, and American-South African Investment, up 1 1/4 to 51. Also rising more than 1 1/2 pieces were Dome Mines and Campbell Red Lake Mines.

Du Pont, climbing 3 3/8 to 145 3/8, was a standout among the blue chips. Chrysler, selling ex-dividend, gunned ahead 1 1/8 to 32, while General Motors rose 1 3/4 to 89 3/8.

One-point gainers included Ford, Allied Chemical and Swift. United Aircraft rose 2 1/4 to 43 after reporting higher earnings.

Bausch & Lomb Up

Bausch & Lomb, the stock tagged with a glamour label thanks to its new contact lens, moved up 3 1/4 to 119 1/2 after trading at a record price of 122 5/8.

Volume expanded to 17.31 million shares from yesterday's 18.12 million.

The active list was dotted with airline issues, all of them finishing with gains. Eastern Air Lines rose 1 1/8 to 25 3/4, and Northwest Airlines moved up 1 3/4 to 36 5/8. Delta rose 1 2 to 43 3/8.

Most Active

Continental Telephone, which eased 1 5 to 23 3/8, stood at the top of the active roster. American Telephone edged up 1 4 to 48 5/8 on the active list, while Polaroid and Westinghouse also added fractions.

The American Stock Exchange scored its first advance in four sessions today as the list rose in stepped-up trading.

The most actively traded stock was Instrument Systems, which gained 7 8 to 11.

Earnings at United Aircraft Show Slight Rise in Quarter

NEW YORK, May 4 (NYT)

Net income of United Aircraft Corp. moved slightly higher during the first quarter despite a decline in sales to the government.

Earnings rose to $8,879 million, or 73 cents a share, from $8,322 million, or 68 cents a share, in the like 1970 quarter. Sales slipped to $544.48 million from $577.54 million in the comparable 1970 period.

W.F. Owmim, chairman, said that an increase in commercial sales was more than offset by a reduction in sales to the government. Commercial sales rose $22.98 million to $302.07 million while government sales dropped $36 million to $166.48 million.

MODERN MEXICO

Where in the World can you find a higher yield with less risk than in MODERN MEXICO!

"Mexico has enjoyed one of the highest rates of economic growth in the world in recent years", says an authoritative U. S. Department of Commerce Study. Why? Because here's one of the world's most stable currencies. Because qualified experts call Mexico "the standout example of responsible government and business in Latin America." Because there is a controlled economic explosion going on in Mexico... in industry, public works, consumer goods, and international trade... which has created a true "investors market" with a yield which invites comparison anywhere in the world.

Maybe this helps to explain why the international "smart money" men are putting their funds down Mexico way... and why maybe you should, too, for exactly the same good reasons. Here are two offerings among many...

BANK TIME DEPOSIT CONTRACTS: Depending upon the length of time involved, these short-term loans to Mexico's Industrial Development Banks yield a net of 9% and up, after Mexican taxes... high enough to make them one of the world's most attractive and safe investments. Interest is payable monthly. Minimum investment: $4,000.00 U. S. dollars, or equivalent in any internationally recognized currency.

BANK LIQUID BONDS: These Demand Deposits pay 8.73% net after Mexican taxes, interest payable quarterly; and your money is immediately available whenever you need it. (These Bonds are also ideal for use in compounding interest earned on Bank Time Deposit Contracts). Minimum Investment: $4,000 U. S. dollars, or equivalent in any internationally recognized currency.

BRIDGE

The most interesting of the 12 deals played recently in a televised bridge match between the world champion Dallas Aces who eventually won the match, and the "Goren All-Stars," gave the Aces a slam swing, and is shown in the diagram.

The bidding by Bill Eisenberg, South, and Bob Hamman, North was nonstandard, and the television commentators, not reasonably, did not attempt to explain it to their audience. West led the heart seven.

There was no point in playing an honor from dummy, for an expert West would not play the ace and let a trump to dummy's jack. On the next club lead East discarded and West took the king with the ace.

South was ready to take the marked finesse in trumps and claim the slam, but another heart lead from West interfered with his plans. He had to ruff East's king with his last trump, and the trump finesse possibility disappeared.

Eisenberg was not dismayed. He led three rounds of diamonds, and West naturally refused to ruff, discarding a spade. South threw a heart from dummy and led another diamond. West discarded another spade, and the declarer made the key play of ruffing his own winning diamond in the dummy. A spade lead to the queen left this position:

North and South were vulnerable. The bidding:

BOOKS

ON BEING TOLD THAT HER SECOND HUSBAND HAS TAKEN HIS FIRST LOVER AND OTHER STORIES

By Tess Slesinger. Quadrangle Books. 399 pp. Reviewed by Jean Stafford

THE original title of Tess Slesinger's eleven short stories, published more than three decades ago, was "Time: The Present," which, according to the editors of this reissue, was "chosen doubtless because they are all set in the 1930s." And they go on, "We have changed that title in the belief that Tess Slesinger's stories transcend their settings..." This statement is true and the remarkable collection is by no means a period piece. But its brilliance, I think, will be more blinding (and thereby more eye-opening) to generations who knew the '30s firsthand. It is easier for the young of today to apprehend the '30s than the '30s were the tempest, and the '30s were the doldrums.

The matters Miss Slesinger deals with are as contemporary as if she were writing today: integration at fancy schools, abortion, unemployment, the liberation of women, the release of sexual conventions from the stranglehold of Mrs. Grundy, the concern of the highbrows with social and economic injustice. But while the young may thrill to her voice, they will hear it either as prophecy or as history and will miss the particular timbre that evokes the urgent immediacy of the Depression's ambience.

On Christmas Eve in the book section of a department store in New York, in the story called "Jobs in the Sky" (1934), the clerks who have been hired for the seasonal rush are on their mettle, on their toes, on pins and needles, and they are on their knees, too, praying that they will be kept on after the holiday spree. "Jesus, it's like heaven to be working," thinks Joey Andrews, a youth who has been eight months out of a job and has spent most of that time in Washington Square with other unemployed, keeping themselves warm at night with newspapers and refusing, with ferocious pride, to stand in breadlines. Miss Paley, who taught school for 20 years and had a way with children, had, twofold, entered "The Commercial World" against the counsel of her principal. While she is not one of the temporary workers, having been in the store's book section for a few months, the rumor is abroad that she is going to get the sack. The day is a frenzy, a debauchery of buying and selling, and the clerks forget their hunger and weariness. When closing time comes, Miss Paley does get the sack, and so do others in nearby departments. The crushing blow is delivered by a deputy of management:

"... Miss Paley stands all by herself, while Mrs. Summers (avoiding her now, for Miss Paley is dead) moves like a plague from hat-girl to hat-girl, infecting them, six of them, with the poison from headquarters that has killed Miss Paley.

We mourn Miss Paley's death, for she is old and a spinster and won't be able to get a job teaching; but a stinker at heart who is his walking paper, the attractive Miss Bode employee, asks him to Christmas Eve par another corpse, say date, for "Joey Anc going to hang around be bad luck."

RED SMITH Curt Flood, AWOL

THE flower of American letters was a nosey in Louisville and everybody's attention was being monopolized by the Kentucky Derby when Flood dashed off a "Dear Bob" letter to the man who was paying his $110,000 salary and grabbed a plane for Lisbon.

Now that Canonero II and Howard J. Samuels have enjoyed their hour, there is time to consider the latest adventures of baseball's burdened crusader.

According to the most recent information available, the fugitive outfielder went on from Portugal to Madrid, stayed there overnight, and checked out for parts unknown.

When he filed suit attacking baseball's reserve system as a form of slave trade, many put him away as an ingrate, hiding the hand that dispensed a princely wage.

When the United States Supreme Court made its landmark decision in Brown vs. Board of Education in Toledo, hardly anybody knew who Brown was and nobody gave a hoot how much money she earned, how she got on with her employers, or what attitudes she held toward civility.

Only the principle at stake counted, only the issue of "separate but equal" schools, on which the court held that "separate educational facilities are inherently unequal."

That's how it should be in Flood's case. The Supreme Court is being asked to decide whether baseball's reserve system does or does not violate federal anti-trust laws. The motives, color, financial soundness, income, and sexual morals of Curtis Charles Flood are all irrelevant.

However, Flood, unlike Brown, is a public figure. Just about everybody interested in his case is a baseball fan, and baseball fans do not make their judgments objectively.

Flood's failure to make it with the Senators has made one point dramatically clear: No matter what the Supreme Court decides, he cannot win personally. Now in his 34th year, he will never again be a major league star.

Even if he were awarded big fat damages, his debts and legal expenses would eat that up. If he wins his suit, everybody else will benefit. The feters will be eased for all other players, present and future. Baseball will gain respectability as an American institution. The only one who has nothing to gain is Curtis Charles Flood.

He reassumed command Feb. 7, however, and was at the helm as the club finished second in the NHL West Division, then lost to Minnesota in six games in a first-round Stanley Cup playoff.

ST. LOUIS, May 4 (AP)—William (Scotty) Bowman has resigned as coach and general manager of the St. Louis Blues, ending a four-season honeymoon in the National Hockey League.

"I am resigning in the best interests of the hockey club," Bowman, 38, said. "You can't single out one thing that brought this about, and there are some confidences I will never reveal."

Bowman, who first assumed control of the Blues in November 1967, during their maiden NHL season, turned coaching duties over to defenseman Al Arbour to start the 1970-71 season.

ABA Stars Get 50 in Second, Top Colonels

SALT LAKE CITY, May 4 (AP)—The Utah Stars, paced by a record-breaking 50-point outburst in the second quarter, rolled to a 136-117 victory over Kentucky last night in the first game of the best-of-seven American Basketball Association's championship playoff.

Kentucky held a 35-38 lead after the opening quarter but the Stars, behind George Stone's 20 points, completely dominated the second period, outscoring the Colonels by 25 points.

The Stars' second-quarter outburst broke by two the league's playoff record for most points by a team in a quarter. The old team was set by Pittsburgh in 1968 and tied by Texas last year.

Zelmo Beaty and Stone tied for Utah scoring honors with 26 each. Beaty added 15 of his points in the second half. Ron Boone scored 24 for the Stars.

Darrell Gardner, who connected on six three-point goals, led the Colonels with 26 points. Rookie Dan Issel, the league's leading scorer in the regular season, scored 17 points in the first quarter but the 6-9 center only scored another ten points for the rest of the game.

Monday's Game Utah 136, Kentucky 117 (Beatty, Stone 26, Boone 24, Gardner 26, 27). (Utah leads best-of-7 series, 1-0).

Chaps Sign Jones DALLAS, May 4.—Collis Jones of Washington, D.C., a 6-foot-8 forward from Notre Dame, signed a four-year contract worth nearly $500,000 with the Texas Chaparrals of the American Basketball Association.

Jones, a first-round draft choice of the National Basketball Association champion Milwaukee Bucks, turned down an offer from the Bucks and said money was not the major factor in his decision to join the Chaps.

In other transactions, the Portland Trail Blazers of the NBA signed Charles Yelverton, a guard from Fordham, to a three-year contract and the NBA Chicago Bulls have signed Purdue guard Larry Weatherford.

TRIPPING—At Enghien, France, the de Mal, one of France's most prestigious trotters, won the Prix de l'Europe, a championship race of 55 international circuit. The event over 2,150 meters, carried a purse of 130,000 francs and attracted nine starters.

UNO DE MAL, owned by Count Pierre de Montebello and driven by Michel Gougeon, closed first in the final 200 meters. The winner, Prix de l'Europe, was won by the 14th French national champion.

AVTO RALLY—At Chababinsk, Jean Dechambre and Jean Lassard of Morocco, driving a Citroen special Maserati, won the 14th Moroccan International. They were one of only nine surviving crews from 58 starters in the four-day competition which covered more than 4,000 kilometers, passing over rough mountains and desert trails in rainy weather.

TEL AVIV, May 4 (Reuters)—Olympic gold medalist Kipchoge Keino of Kenya entered his third defeat at the Hapoel Games when he finished second in the 3,000-meter run today.

Keino, former world record holder for this distance, was overtaken by Merutu Yiefor, of Ethiopia, with a last-lap surge. The winning time was 13 minutes 52.6 seconds.

Austrian Skiers Can Choose Their Own Ski Manufacturer

VIENNA, May 4 (UPI)—Austrian skiers will have a choice of their ski brand before the coming Olympic season, it was learned here today.

The country's big five ski manufacturers—Aachle, Billiard, Fischer, Kastle and Kneissl—surprisingly renounced their traditional claims that skiers had to stick to their "ski stables."

The agreement on the free choice of skis was one of the strongest demands made by team manager Professor Franz Hoppehler to overcome the Austrian ski crisis before next Winter's Olympics at Sapporo, Japan.

Ubleis of Austria Is Perfect In Harness Drivers' Contest

WESTBURY, N.Y., May 4 (NYT)—Adolf Ubleis, at 33 the youngest of the eight international reinsmen seeking harness racing's world driving championship, raced to a tremendous lead by sweeping the first three events in the nine-track tour which was launched last night at Rosemead Raceway.

The feats of the native of Baden, a suburb of Vienna, were all the more remarkable because prior to last night, his entire career had been devoted exclusively to steering trotters, yet two of his three victories were behind pacers.

After triumphing with the 2-year-old Ubleis (10:00) in 2:10 1/5 in the first race, the Austrian ace succeeded with Wanague ($10.20) in 2:05 2/5 and with Moonowner ($27.20) in 2:06 3/5.

All horses and post positions are determined by the luck of the draw. The championship, being defended by Hervé Filion of Canada, will go to the driver with the most points following 30 events at nine racetracks in this country and in Canada. Fifty points will be awarded for each triumph, with 25 going to each runner-up. Third will be worth 12 points, fourth eight points and fifth five.

At the conclusion of the inaugural night's action, Ubleis, who is a member of one of Austria's leading harness racing families, had 150 points. Closest to him at 33 points were Billy Haughton of the United States (with a second and a fourth) and the 57-year-old Karsten Buer (with a second and a fourth).

The match was staged at the Nevada Ice Palace, home of the Las Vegas Gamblers hockey team, which was converted for the first time into a boxing arena. There was nothing wrong with the arena except that too few people came in—perhaps 3,500—and the craftsmanship erecting the ring left much to be desired.

The fight itself was hardly spectacular although both boys fought hard. But there were untimely interruptions.

The fifth came in the sixth when the referee was raising the top strap of the ring rope collapsed, which halted the action in the ring.

In the eighth round, Griffith scored with a long left hook to Indian Red's jaw and Indian Red went hurtling backwards.

Whether he was stung or caught off balance was debatable because at that moment the ropes collapsed a second time.

The crowd cheered and also booed but there were more cheers than boos the second time because by then it was getting funny.

Derby Winner Canonero II Isn't Even Best in Venezuela

BALTIMORE, May 4 (UPI)—A phone call yesterday to the Instituto Nacional de Hipodromos de Caracas, Venezuela, was a waste of time. No one there could elaborate on Canonero II's three "missing" races, the three at La Rinconada which preceded the colt's victory in the Kentucky Derby.

"No one was," he said. "It was amazing. We could not expect this kind of race from this horse. He had run well here at La Rinconada, but not that well. He was a tremendous surprise to the turfmen, the newsmen, everybody. While we all had a good opinion of him we didn't think he could win."

"All I knew about Canonero was that he finished 11th in a mile and a quarter race in which Ejemplo, an older distance horse, was second," Trotter said. "The Ejemplo people wanted to try and sell the horse here in the States. I think they were asking about $120,000. Wonder what the price must be now?"

Ejemplo, carrying 127 pounds, was defeated by a neck by Yves in the Feb. 7 race to which Trotter referred. Canonero II wound up next to last. The appearance was his second of the year and the race, it appeared, was his only one in a "classic" down there.

Last fall, in the Del Mar (Calif.) Futurity, the filly Juna Darling outdusted Canonero II by nearly eight lengths. Canonero II ran fifth in the six-furlong event.

"The man you want to call," Trotter said, "is Amin Saiden. He's had horses here with Las Barreras. Saiden's a knowledgeable horseman, and he speaks the language, racing and English."

Saiden was most cooperative. "Canonero was not the best 3-year-old down here this season," he began, "but he was one of the best ones. I'd say he was in the top five. The best was Yves, who won that race. Trotter told you about Yves being bred in Argentina, born in the second semester of the year. He was special, I think. This day he had Example he carried 114, Canonero II had 105 and was way back."

Saiden said Venezuela was not prepared for Canonero II's big effort in Louisville last Saturday.

"I don't believe it, for an instant, it would not alter the fact that ownership of people is altogether repugnant and should not be tolerated in any field, least of all as a fundamental of the business that takes bows as our national pastime."

Principles and Personalities When the United States Supreme Court made its landmark decision in Brown vs. Board of Education in Toledo, hardly anybody knew who Brown was and nobody gave a hoot how much money she earned, how she got on with her employers, or what attitudes she held toward civility.

Only the principle at stake counted, only the issue of "separate but equal" schools, on which the court held that "separate educational facilities are inherently unequal."

Mayor Nixon's Gotham

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON — The trouble with New York is that Richard Nixon decided to run for President instead of mayor.

Baker

Some will say that this is also the trouble with the United States, but never mind that just now: we are on to bigger intellectual exercises than President-baiting.

Answer: I want to make one thing clear, and that is that New Yorkers are being brought together after years in which they were split apart by previous administrations.

Question: Your honor, you may recall that in the campaign you promised to bring us all together.

Answer: Just a minute, Bill. You will recall—and of course you, Bob, were there at the Grand Concourse rally when I said this—that I had a plan for bringing us all together again, but couldn't divulge it until I was elected.

Question: Your honor, you may recall that in the campaign you promised to bring us all together.

"The beautiful thing is that a porcelain pipe doesn't like a briar pipe, pick up any tobacco flavors. You can smoke one brand one day and another one the next and they both taste just as good and pure."

The Pipe May Be Worth the Trip

By Jan Sjöby

COPENHAGEN.—Back in the days of the stovetop hat, when Hans Christian Andersen was still an aspiring young man, gentlemen of quality along the Stroegte and around fashionable King's New Square sported porcelain pipes, elaborately decorated in blue-on-white.

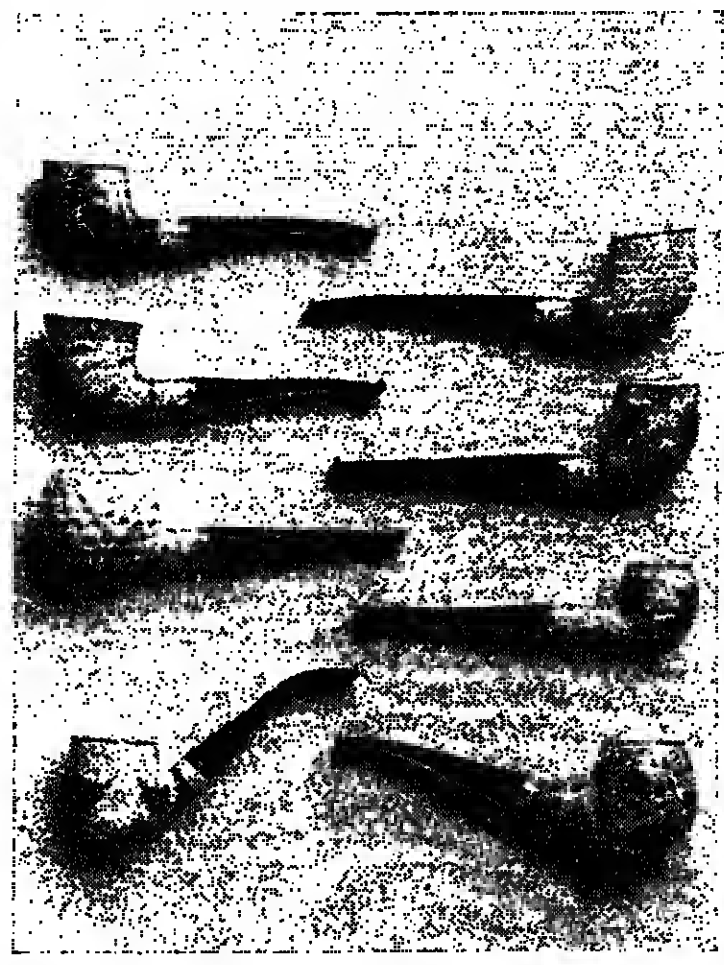

Hand Painted

Muselmalet porcelain is hand painted in elaborate designs and engravings. It made Royal Copenhagen—and its chief competitor Bing & Gröndahl—world famous.

At least three theories have been advanced:

- One, that it refers to the seashell musing, a design that tended to dominate in early Danish chinaware.
Two, that the expensive blue point was sold by Levantine merchants, packaged in mussel shells.
Three, that the traders who brought the precious stuff, camel-back, from the Far East were Muslims.

"It started in 1669, when King Frederik IX turned 70," explains

John Christiansen, spokesman for the Royal Copenhagen. "We wanted to give him something really good. The king is an old pipe smoker and we settled for a couple of monogrammed pipes in real Danish marselet china."

The Royal Copenhagen craftsmen developed a pipe model with two layers of porcelain in the head, separated by a pillow of air. The innovation resulted in a head no hotter than that of a regular briar pipe.

Last Fall

Royal Danish launched the revived, redesigned porcelain pipe on the Danish market last fall. By this spring it has become somewhat of a status symbol among status-conscious Danes.

"We'd like to export some pipes too," comments Mr. Christiansen, "but the thing is that we haven't been able to produce enough pipes for the Danes so far. If you want a marselet porcelain pipe in the near future, you'll most likely have to pick it up in Copenhagen."

PEOPLE: 'What Do Americans Think?'

The forum was billed as "What Do Americans Think?", and although somewhat cynical, young English girl suggested beforehand that the title might be slightly improved by the insertion of a comma between the "What" and the "Do."

Challenged from the floor, for example, on its assertion of on-going "upward mobility" for all strata of American society ("What do you mean? That the average man can make more money to consume more surplus and useless products?")

Among the questions from the audience, the one that elicited our favorite response was: "What exactly is the Silent Majority?" From an obscure corner came a tenuous squeak: "Us, Republicans."

Before the discussion, incidentally, Susan George, anthropologist, and others assorted Anatomical Bombs, was reminiscing on the good old days back home "when men weren't afraid to show their prowess."
